Welcome

January 2025

Happy New Year to you. I hope you had a really amazing Festive Season with family and friends. Like everyone at that time of year, I ate too much and have been trying to work it off at the gym ever since.

Well, 2024 was a great year with the release of Built for Pleasure at end of March which has been getting great reviews. It follows the story of Emily and Ethan, and their ups and downs on the road to finding love. You may remember from Built for Sin, Ethan is Xander's younger brother, and Emily is Georgina's friend. For those of you who haven't read Built for Pleasure yet, it's an inter-connected standalone book in this series which can be read independently, and in any order. (The first book in this series is Built for Sin, "first" being based on release date order rather than reading order.)

I've been pretty quiet with newsletters since then, and I apologise for that. But I have some exciting news for you. I've been busy working on the next inter-connected book in this series, Built to Protect. This story is about Simone and Ramon, who both appear in the other two books. Simone is sassy, independent, caring and strong, while Ramon is a protector; dependable, cynical, and hides his caring heart under a reserved demeanour.

Plans don't always come to fruition when writing, because the characters have a mind of their own, and become more prominent than originally intended. Such is the case with Simone and Ramon. They were so insistent on having their story told that the story I had planned to write about Louisa, had to be shifted.

At this stage, I plan on releasing Built to Protect on 30th March 2025. You will be able to pre-order on Amazon for Kindle and Paperback, so keep an eye out for pre-order date. (I'm hoping to start it two weeks prior to release and will let you know beforehand.)

Stay tuned to my social media pages and website for further updates.

And of course, if you read any of my books, (or any author's books), don't forget to leave a review on Amazon or Goodreads. You don't have to make a comment, just your star rating is enough, and always appreciated. You can also find my books on BookBub, or hopefully, your local bookstore. (If not, ask them to order it in for you.)
